Is Special County Election for Legislature Wanted?

Citizens Should Report Opinions on This at Once

Judge Rider, Atkins, Hope Star Tabulate Opinions for Governor

THE COST, THE LAW

No Appointment Is Legal—Approximate Cost of Election Is $750

The vacancy created in one of Hempstead county's two seats in the House of Representatives by the death of Luke F. Monroe cannot be filled by appointment.

Under constitutional law Governor Carl Bailey must either call a special election for this county or the seat will remain vacant for this session.

The governor's office Thursday afternoon telephoned local citizens asking them to determine Hempstead county sentiment about calling a special election, and advising that Mr. Bailey would be guided entirely by the citizens' wishes.

County Judge Frank Rider, W. S. Atkins, the governor's campaign manager in this county, and A. H. Washburn, for the newspaper, went over the facts at a conference late Thursday afternoon and decided to get a quick survey of county sentiment.

The purpose of this publication is to notify all citizens as to the facts, and ask them to give their individual opinions either to Judge Rider, to Mr. Atkins' office in the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. building, or to Hope Star office. A decision must be reached early next week, and the unofficial committee would like to have an immediate response.

Cost About $750

At the conference Thursday Judge Rider estimated the approximate cost of a special election to Hempstead county to be $750 for judges, clerks, election supplies and incidental expense.

Mr. Atkins said no election could be held sooner than 30 days—which would give the county only 15 days' representation in the closing period of the session with the new member. The election, Mr. Atkins added, would either be an "open field" or the County Central Committee would select the nominee—the procedure having been handled either way in the past.

Citizens are asked to make a decision in this matter, and report immediately, after which their opinions will be tabulated.

Urges Citizens to Help School Bill

Crawford Green Addresses Rotarians on Harrison-Fletcher Bill

An appeal to individual citizens to back up the Harrison-Fletcher senate bill to provide federal funds for the common schools of the states, was made in a speech Friday noon to Hope Rotary club in Barlow hotel by Crawford Green, head of the research bureau of the State Department of Education.

Speaking on a program arranged by the Rev. Fred R. Harrison, Mr. Green said that the proposed federal appropriation would give Arkansas an initial yearly aid of $254 per child of school age—which is half as much as the per capita tax of $1.91 that the state itself appropriated last year.

The only "strings" attached to the federal aid proposed to be given the states are these two requirements, he said:

1. That the state maintain a 100-day term (eight months).
2. That the state spend annually in the future at least as much money as it spent in the school year 1933-34 (which would be hard to live up to, Mr. Green said, since 1933-34 marked the low point in revenues).

The Harrison-Fletcher bill, he continued, calls for a federal appropriation of 100 million dollars the first year, divided among the states on a pro-rata basis; and increasing 50 million dollars per year until the total annual amount becomes 300 million.

"Why should the federal government participate in education?" the speaker asked.

"Because this is a democracy that for its success depends on an enlightened people—and we are today a highly mobile people. One fifth of America's population lives in some state other than their native one.

"But some states have more children and less wealth than other states. This bill doesn't equalize matters, but the

Owed "Obligation to Gentry and His Crowd"—Ouster Carries 26-1

BULLETIN
LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Bailey Friday afternoon signed the Murry house bill ousting from office U. A. Gentry, state insurance commissioner, who refused to resign. It carried the emergency clause, taking immediate effect upon the gubernatorial signature.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The senate passed Friday and sent to Governor Bailey for signature the Murry house bill to remove State Insurance Commissioner U. A. Gentry from office. The senate vote was 26 to 1.

Wilson of Hope cast the only dissenting vote in the senate, explaining from the floor that he was prompted by a personal obligation to Gentry and his crowd for assistance in 1932. Gentry charged that the new administration aimed the measure at him in retaliation for his vote for Judge R. A. Cook for governor in the August Democratic primary.

"Lonely Hearts" Pay 13 Million Seeking Romance

2 Million Men and Women Enrolled in 400 Lonely Heart Clubs

MOST HAVE THRIFT Insurance and Home-Ownership Reflect Ways of Middle-Aged

NEW YORK.—Every year two million hopeful American men and women, members of 400 "lonely hearts" clubs, spend $4,000,000 in dues and $9,000,000 in postage in their search for a suitable mate, according to a national survey of the matrimonial agency business just completed by The American Magazine.

This huge marriage "industry" results in approximately 5,000 weddings each year, the survey revealed. In other words, it is one half of one percent effective. Other facts turned up by the investigation follow:

As far back as 1859 there were matrimonial clubs in this country, but in a small dishonest way. Country lads were induced to send $5 to a city slicker who promised to provide a beautiful young heiress, and when the country lad had sent his money he was that much poorer and wiser. Later, shrewd people on the look-out for easy money figured that an honest matrimonial club could be conducted at a good profit with little effort, and since that discovery, the business has been growing by leaps and bounds.

Romance by Mail
"The lonely are like the poor: they are always with us. The social club offers them everything they desire. If properly conducted, it can not fail. Its function is simple. For a small fee, by a personal obligation to Gentry and his crowd for assistance in 1932."

Gentry charged that the new administration aimed the measure at him in retaliation for his vote for Judge R. A. Cook for governor in the August Democratic primary.

Not all of the clubs are honest. Some exist for the purpose of black mail, some sell obscenity, some deal in even stranger things. Women over fifty represent one of the major problems of every club. They clog the rolls, have an exalted opinion of their portance, to men and never seem to realize that they have lost the charm which men demand in women. The average person who enrolls in a club is ready and willing to "tell all" and it is from this that the danger of blackmail and swindle emanates.

The Middle-Aged
"Most of the women club members are school teachers, nurses, office workers and widows. Most of the marriages are between middle-aged people who look for companionship insurance policies and home free of mortgage. The cities of the eastern seaboard are gold mines for the clubs, and the South is full of lonely hearts. A California man who advertised for a Southern girl got 13,000 letters."

"Many people believe that the states of the nation should conduct matrimonial clubs, or at least supervise them and put them on a safe basis. With state sanction, every member could be checked and investigated. Something should be done to stop the deceit and chicanery which goes on because girls and boys, men and women, are lonely."

Unbeaten Emmet Girls' Team Bids for State Honors

Tradition Gives Best Basketball Teams to the Small Towns

TO PLAY AT UNION Emmet Carries Memories of Sparkman Sparklers Into Title Play

Football may hold the sports spotlight in the larger towns through the fall of the year—but now is the season that the smaller communities come into their own with basketball teams playing on probably 50 courts in Hempstead and Nevada counties.

Only a handful have indoor courts, but the moment the weather clears up their season will be in full blast.

Basketball, with its smaller squad and expense requirements, is well adapted to the small communities—and how they go for it!

The Small Towns Shine
In fact, it is the small towns and not the big ones that have produced the most brilliant basketball teams both in this section and the entire state. Columbus, Patmos and Guernsey have been famous in their time, in Hempstead county; while over in Nevada county Bodew, Rosston and Willisville are basketball capitals—Bodew sending a boys' team into the semifinals of the state tournament last year.

The girls play basketball in a big way, too—and, as with the boys' teams, so most of the best girls' teams come from the small towns and rural communities. The state champion girls' team for the last two years has come from Union, a rural consolidated high school near El Dorado.

A decade ago there came out of Sparkman, in Dallas county a few miles east of Gurdon, the Sparkman Sparklers—the most famous girls' basketball team in Arkansas history, headed by Quinnie Hamm.

Emmet Undefeated
This season's standout in southwest Arkansas basketball appears to be the Emmet High School girls' team which has an unbeaten season to date, with 16 consecutive victories.

Memories of the famed Sparkman Sparklers float through the minds of eastern Hempstead and western Nevada folks as they crowd the Emmet gymnasium on rainy nights to watch the home-town girls perform.

But they won't really know how good the girls are until this Saturday night, when Emmet invades the home court of the state champions, Union High School, near El Dorado.

The game at Union will be a stand-out for the season. Union has been state champion for the last two years. Emmet is the team that lost to Union in last year's state tournament by only five points.

This year's Emmet squad is stronger, and picks speed and a scoring punch that has swept the Hempstead-Nevada-county tie girls to undefeated seasons.

Emmet made it 16 straight last Tuesday night, on their own court, overwhelming Malvern Central girls by 40 to 20.

Led by C. Wells, their high scorer, and Crank, another forward, the Emmet girls have averaged 44 points per game to date.

Coached by J. B. Little, the Emmet girls' team has defeated, besides Malvern, the following teams: Cleveland, Broughton, Lebanon, Gale, Willisville, Guernsey, Columbus, Ashdown and Reader.

Iron Treatments Benefit Victims of Anemia
Almost Immediately

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiea, the Health Magazine.

Among other forms of anemia due to deficiency of iron are those arising from multiple causes, particularly in women; but occasionally also in men. For many years a common form of anemia, known as chlorosis, affected young girls. This form has become much less common in recent years, since the way of living for girls has changed greatly. The modern girl gets plenty of outdoor air and exercise, and, unless she is dieting, is likely to eat a fairly well-balanced diet.

The condition also is exceedingly common in women between 40 and 50, and is associated with the changes that occur in the woman of that age. As this type of anemia develops, the patient is likely to have small complexion, dry skin, and occasionally painful cracks around the corners of the mouth. Not infrequently, too, the tongue becomes red and sore, and the fingernails crack easily.

When the blood is examined in these cases, it is found that color and amount of red coloring matter are low. In this type of anemia, the patients almost immediately begin to improve when they receive a sufficient amount of a good iron preparation.

The iron treatment usually is given over long periods of time. It is well to have it prescribed by a doctor, since there are many forms of iron adaptable to different types of cases.

A fairly well-balanced diet, with plenty of meats, such as liver and kidneys, vegetables, and fresh fruits, is especially important in these cases.

Some people have a little difficulty with their digestion when they take iron, but usually this trouble is temporary and the condition improves promptly after a few days.

Anemias of this type fortunately are seldom, if ever, fatal. The condition is usually discovered promptly because of the appearance and activities of the person affected, and the treatment is so definite that any competent doctor can secure prompt improvement if the patient will co-operate.

In addition to this type of anemia, there are also deficiencies of the blood which result from infection with hookworm, disturbances of digestive functions, ulcers, cancers, and other conditions in which there may be a steady loss of blood, accompanied by intoxication.

In all these cases, the treatment must be applied not only to the anemia, but also to the complicating factor of disease.

Contracts Put Girls in Pictures, But Not in Motion Pictures!

HOLLYWOOD.—"And so little Miss Zilchworth, a modern Cinderella, received a Hollywood contract!" You often read stories with endings like that. The inference is that Miss Zilchworth, Miss Twerp, or whatever her name happens to be, has achieved something very enviable and now stands on the golden fringe of movie stardom.

But the truth is that the Misses Zilchworth and Twerp are destined to become members of studio stock companies. For a long time, barring a real Cinderella miracle, they will be just names on a long roster of undistinguished men and women who, though technically "in" the movies, still are trying to win a chance to act for them.

They'll report regularly for work or study, and over a period of months will put in more time at the studios than do full-fledged stars.

"Stock girls" are kept busy, but not at acting. Their chief duty is posing for publicity pictures. In August they don furs and heavy winter sport costumes and tramp around in snowbanks made of powdered gypsum and uncooked corn flakes. In January they hoo into bathing suits and frisk around the edges of chilly pools.

Throughout the year they're constantly on call for "stunt" pictures. They must pose with animals, birds, freakish inventions, minor celebrities, prize babies, swordfish, and visiting winners of movie essay contests.

Toby Was Tops
Most publicity pictures are known indelicately, but practically, as "leg art." For this sort of thing, Toby Wing was the champion "stock girl" of all Hollywood history.

The appearance of a "stock girl" in only a few bit parts in movies, but her face and figure were known to the nation over in thousands of printed pictures.

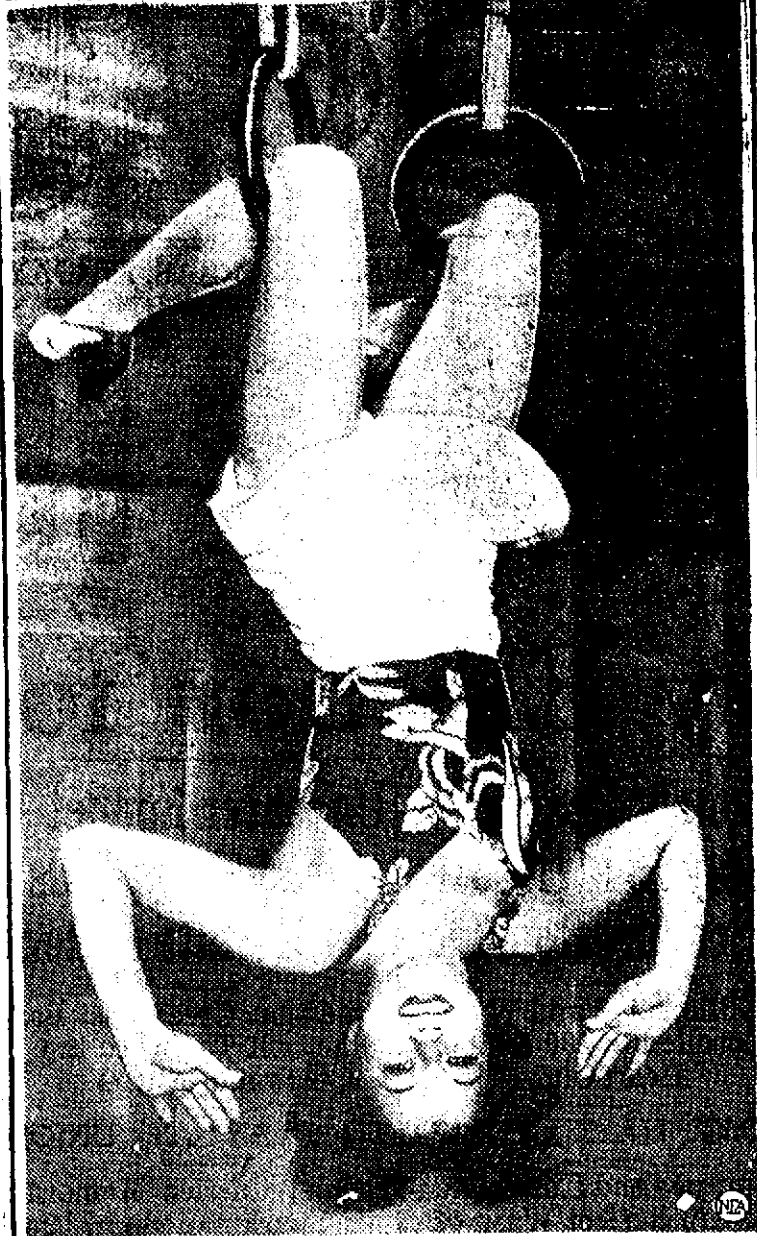

She actually made personal appearance tours, though there must have been few people in the audiences who remembered ever seeing her on the screen. And there was a time when she received more fan mail than some of the top stars on the Paramount lot. Miss Wing couldn't see much point in remaining on the stock list, so she went into vaudeville. And, incidentally, she's engaged to Pinky Tomlin.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PAUL I. King of Northumbria, becomes private citizen PAUL FERRONE when he abandons the throne of ARDATH RICHMOND, Canadian-born actress. Paul's younger brother, JOSEPH, succeeds to the kingship.

With calm finality, Paul signs the formal abdication papers at his royal lodge, says, "Well, good-bye, it is all over." Then, after briefly wishing his brother well, he heads to the royal airport, boards a plane and soars off into the night, leaving his empire behind him forever.

Paul and Ardath marry, choose a charming villa on Bay St. Francis, Paul revels in his new freedom. He's delightfully happy with his bride. And then one day he walks into the nearby village of San Lorenzo. He overheard curious tourists asking a shopkeeper where that "eking and his girl friend" have hid out.

Angry, terrified lest he be recognized, Paul turns back to the villa, thinking only of protection behind its walls.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional and imaginary and are not intended to portray any actual persons or events.

CHAPTER III

"BUT dearest," Ardath was saying, pouting prettily, "these are all people we know. There won't be any strangers there."

"I know," said Paul. "It's just that—that—oh, I guess the truth is I hate to run the gantlet of the tourists in San Lorenzo. I hate to see them all swinging their cameras at me, to hear them jabbering, 'Look—there he is!' in five languages."

He grimed ruefully. "I suppose it'll be all right, though, especially since it'll be fairly dark."

"And anyway," said Ardath, "they won't be at the Casino. That, thank heaven, is too expensive for the ordinary run of tourist. Besides, the countess is expecting us. It would look a bit foolish, if we turned her down at the last minute."

"I suppose so." Reluctantly, Paul turned to go to his dressing room and change for the evening attire. "Though I must say," he said, "the Countess di Marco is not precisely a lady for whose good opinion I would like awake nights and worry."

"Why, Paul! She's nice—" began Ardath, but Paul had gone. He undressed and bathed moodily, and told himself that he must not quarrel with Ardath—he must not, for he was all she had and she was all he had.

HE

crossed to a cabinet in the wall, took down a bottle and poured a drink, to lift himself out of this depression. He had, he reflected, been using this remedy rather frequently of late. Oh, well, the tourist season would be over by and by. Or maybe, as time went on, people would simply get used to the idea of an ex-king being around and would stop making such a fuss. He finished his dressing and went to rejoin Ardath.

They drove down the road, sped through the town and went to the gimcrack gilt-and-stucco Casino.

Stooping, she peeled her gown over her head and tossed it blithely away. . . . Paul felt a sudden, acute desire to get out of the Casino and away from the vacuous folk who peeped in.

They entered a large room. At one end, there was a bar; at the other, a raised dais where a small but energetic colored orchestra was doing things to a torch song. A few couples were dancing; others sat at little tables, sipping drinks; still others came and went through the double doors that gave on the game rooms; but most of the guests of whom there were at least fifty—were simply standing about in groups, chatting.

Ardath, Paul saw, had been mistaken; they were not all people he knew. He did recognize many of them, however; they were members of the gay sporting set that drifted from one international capital to another, from this playground to the next, dedicated, apparently, to the self-imposed task of filling every minute of life with activity, whether the activity meant anything in particular or not, so that there could never be a moment of boredom, of solitude, or of reflection.

A SLIM young man with an old face disengaged himself from a group and came over to them. The Countess di Marco slipped an arm about his waist and said, "Reggie, Van Twyne—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ferrone." She said it rather proudly; not yet had the former king of Northumbria as plain "mister."

Reggie Van Twyne bowed. He was an American, of the type known to the Sunday supplements as "rich young playboy." Paul knew him by repute; a gay youngster, not particularly depraved or and wandered to the balcony that overlooked the water. He stood there, leaning idly against a pillar and smoking in silence, when a bulky shape appeared in the doorway.

"Oh—it's you, Ferrone?" said a gruff voice. The shape came nearer and resolved itself into the person of Baron Lanza, one of the wealthiest industrialists in all Northumbria. He swaggered over to the railing, looking—as he always did—as powerful and as ruthless as a grizzly. Lighting a cigar, he stood surveying Paul with an expression on his face which Paul could not quite make out.

"You know," said the baron suddenly, "good job, your quitting when you did. Good job for me, I mean. Those tours of yours. They didn't do me any good."

"Tours?" said Paul. He had never liked Baron Lanza; nor did he like the half-contemptuous way in which the man said "Ferrone."

"Uh," said the baron. "Down into the coal fields around Lazare. Depressed areas—you know. Stirred up too much talk. Made my stockholders ask a lot of silly questions. No good."

He stepped inside. Paul remembered his last tour to the Lazare coal fields, along the north coast of Northumbria. He had gone into that hopelessly depressed region some six months ago, and had seen there poverty and degradation such as he had never before dreamed of. Hardest of all to endure had been the heartbreaking look of hope and trust with which the jobless miners and their families had greeted him. Their king, they had been sure, could do something for them—what, they did not know, but surely something.

Paul savagely threw away his cigar and returned to the bar. Mademoiselle de Lys had gone. The orchestra was playing loudly, people's voices were raised, everyone seemed to be talking at once. Nearby, Reggie Van Twyne's pretty wife, her face flushed, was arguing with the eastern potentate and an Argentine polo player.

"Can, too," she said shrilly. "Can dance just as good as de Lys ever did. Don't need fan. Look!"

She made her way suddenly to the end of the room by the orchestra and said something to the director. There was a ruffle of drums, which stopped the conversation and drew all eyes to her.

"Fan dance! By me!" she cried. Stooping, she peeled her gown off over her head and tossed it blithely away. It fell on the neck of the drummer, who leered delightedly. Before she could go any farther Reggie was at her side. Grinning shamefacedly, he managed to pick her up in his arms and carry her away, while someone retrieved the discarded frock, bore it after them and the orchestra struck up a new tune.

Paul felt a sudden, acute desire to get out of the Casino and away from the vacuous folk who peeped in. As he looked about him for Ardath, he heard a man's voice, at his elbow. Someone was asking him, "Well, Paul, was it such a bargain—giving up your throne for . . . THIS?"

and noticed on the screen, but, even when she wins a speaking part, there is a heart-breaking likelihood that it will be left out of the picture. And then she's just another face on the cutting-room floor.

In importance, she's only a step above a Hollywood extra. Indeed, she often is called upon for duties ordinarily performed by extras—providing atmosphere for night club sets and the like.

Sometimes she is put to work as stand-in for a star, which job provides some experience, but little encouragement. And all the time she's worrying about whether the studio will renew her contract at the end of each six months.

For five years Geneva Sawyer was a stock actress at Twentieth Century Fox, and in that time she became one of Hollywood's most talented chorus girls. Bill Robinson was responsible for her eventual rise.

He noticed her tapping talent and asked her to teach some dance routines to Shirley Temple. Miss Sawyer responded so ably that she was named assistant to Jack Haskell, studio dance director.

Typical Cinderellas

Terry Ray, Terry Walker, and Priscilla Lawson all have been under stock contract at Paramount for more than a year.

Miss Lawson, of Indianapolis, was a fashion and commercial artist's model before she was brought to Hollywood.

Miss Ray, daughter of a Kansas City barber, arrived armed with letters of introduction, and lost them. She was working as waitress in a confectionery when William Demarest, an agent to whom one of her lost letters had been addressed, came in. She identified herself, won a screen test and a contract.

Terry Walker, originally from Alaska, lived in Hollywood 10 years without being noticed. Then her portrait by Norman Rockwell on magazine cover set talent scouts to scouring the country for her. She was discovered singing in a night club in Miami and brought to Paramount.

Those stories are typical of scores of stock girls. Not much has been heard of them since they first were identified as modern Cinderellas. But they're still hoping for a break.

Making 1937 Happy

The most common complaint among housewives seems to be about planning meals. "I get so sick going to the telephone and ordering chops and steak, carrots and cabbage," says Mrs. Jones. "What do people eat, that's different, anyway?"

Well, some quiet evening when Joe has gone to his meeting, sit down with pencil and seven pieces of paper. Or fourteen or twenty-one, or any multiple of seven. Then think over all the things the family likes as a whole, with an occasional special, such as Joe's favorite gingerbread or Sally's baked beans. Mark each card for a day in the week, and then make out simple menus for that day. You have no idea what a help it is.

No, the family won't learn to call Monday "hash day" or Thursday "scaloped oyster night" because the charm of it is that you can shuffle the cards and change when you like. But with those reminders on the wall, you are going to wake up singing and not develop a telephone phobia.

JESUS THE WATER OF LIFE
Text: John 4:7-26

The story of the meeting of Jesus with a woman of Samaria at Jacob's well has some interesting aspects that are not indicated in the lesson itself. Perhaps one of the most striking angles is the way in which the story emphasizes the unconventional nature of Jesus, and the extent to which He disregarded well-established codes and customs of His day that were out of accord with reality.

Repeatedly His enemies challenged Him on this ground, and Jesus had to defend His free and common-sense practice against the formal rules and regulations with which tradition had curbed the mind and the spirit. In the east there has been on such freedom of public conversation between men and women as has been the practice in the western world. It was decidedly unusual for a man to be found conversing with a woman at a public place, such as a well, and one can easily understand the amazement of the disciples when they returned from the city and found Jesus thus engaged.

When the woman concerned was one whose reputation was none too savory, whose character, not unlikely, may have been indicated in her appearance, the amazement was all the greater. And yet it is in this story of the conversation of Jesus with a much-married woman, at that time living in adultery, that one feels the purity and beauty of Jesus Himself, and the quality of that life which drew forth all that was best in those with whom He came in contact, even though that best was buried beneath sinful characters and environments.

The story has some very interesting sidelights. When Jesus began to question the woman, in a somewhat pressing and embarrassing way, concerning her own personal life, she immediately switched the conversation to other things. She wanted to know why Jesus, being a Jew, should ask for a drink of water from her, a Samaritan woman. It was a very pointed question, and indicated that she wanted to turn the conversation away from the subject of personal sins to that of social and religious customs. People who have been little concerned about the practice of Christian virtue and the upholding of Christian truth often have been the most ready to discuss theoretical questions of religion and theology. They have, in fact, been known to become rather violent and intolerant over the discussion of doctrines which they have done little to put into practice.

When the woman interjected the question concerning worship—whether the true place for it was in Jerusalem, or in the Samaritan mountains—Jesus turned her question and the discussion very quickly to higher things.

It was to this woman that He gave that deep and beautiful word concerning truth and worship: "That God is a spirit, and that they who worship must worship in spirit and in truth; and that neither at Jerusalem, nor in any mountain, but wherever devout souls are found, there the true worship of God may be."

With this was the teaching of Jesus concerning the water of life, the deep satisfaction that this woman, with all her quest of earthly happiness, had never found. Can any words apply more truly than these to our life of today? How many in the modern world are like this woman, seeking happiness and satisfaction in unconventional ways and acts, defying codes and moral standards alike, but finding no real happiness or satisfaction?

It is to those that an unconventional Christ, Himself living above mere formal codes and precepts, reveals the true way of life, the yielding of the spirit to the spirit of God, and the uplifting of the soul under the power of love and righteousness.

IF YOU WANT TO BE EXTRA CAREFUL WITH COLDS

Use Vicks VapoRub . . . This New Improved Way

During this treacherous winter weather, no cold should be neglected. Don't delay. Don't experiment with half-way measures. The moment you come down with a cold, go straight to bed and use your old dependable Vicks VapoRub—and use it this new improved way. Then you not only enjoy all the benefits that have made VapoRub the standby of two generations; you actually increase its effectiveness.

Lengthens and Strengthens VapoRub's Action—Massage it briskly on the back (between and below the shoulder blades) as well as on the throat and chest—for 3 full minutes. Then—spread a thick layer over the chest and cover with a warm cloth. Each step of this "3-Minute VapoRub Massage" helps to lengthen and strengthen VapoRub's famous two-way action.

Relieves a Cold Two Ways at Once—Almost before the VapoRub is well rubbed on, it starts to bring relief two ways at once—2 direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat, and chest.

This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm and makes breathing easier—relieves irritation—eases the cough—helps break congestion. Long after you relax into comfortable sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets—This safe external treatment cannot possibly upset the stomach, as constant internal "dosing" is so apt to do. It can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

Note: Any "cold" not promptly relieved by this thorough treatment with Vicks VapoRub should have the attention of a doctor.

YOUR BISCUITS ARE ALWAYS SO DELICIOUS... HOW DO YOU DO IT?

I NEVER TAKE A CHANCE WITH "FICKLE" FLOURS. I ALWAYS USE LIGHT CRUST.

Experts tell how to cut down baking failures

● Cooking experts say that there is more chance to go wrong on flour than on any other ingredient used for biscuits, cakes and pies. They know that a "fickle" flour—one which varies from sack to sack—can spoil all your baking.

It is well-known that there is just as much difference in wheats as in apples, for instance. That's why the same brand of flour can vary so from sack to sack. These flours are known as "fickle" flours, because you cannot count on them to perform the same way twice in baking.

Why take a chance, when it is easy to be absolutely certain? The finest cooks in the Southwest have tested and approved Light Crust Flour for two generations. It is used by more women in the Southwest than any other flour offered for sale.

Only the tenderest, center part of the wheat kernel is used in making Light Crust Flour, and only the choicest wheat. Light Crust never varies. To bake the light, dainty biscuits and cakes your family love, avoid "fickle" flours. Follow the judgment of famous cooks. Use Light Crust Flour always.

HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—For the first time in half a century, a new style of balking billiards will be played in this country the week of January 25-30, when Jake Schaefer and Willie Hoppe meet in a match game in Chicago.

It is the 11.2 game which has been played in Europe the past five years, but which will be known here as 28.2, the 28 meaning inches in comparison to the 11, which is centimeters.

Balkline is a handicap game originated to forestall long and tedious runs by masters. Such experts as Frank Ives, the elder Jake Schaefer, and their contemporaries compiled runs at straight billiards into the thousands, which consumed monotonous hours.

Then 14.2 balkline came into vogue. A line was drawn 14 inches from each rail, dividing the table into nine spaces. In all of these spaces, except the center, a player was allowed to make only two shots, with both object balls in that space. On the second shot he was required to drive one of the object balls across a line.

This broke up the rail and corner nurse. It forced more driving of at least one object ball, hence increased the possibilities of error and placed a greater premium on control.

As the 14-inch game became less difficult for the stars, who perfected a nurse along the line, the handicap was increased. The lines were moved out 18 inches from the rail. Also the one shot in balk, which became known as the 18.1 game, was evolved. This meant that if both object balls resided in any space except the center court, one had to be driven across the line on the first shot.

New Style is 20 Per Cent More Difficult Than 18.1

Players found the 18.1 game about 30 per cent more difficult than the 18.2. Those capable of runs of 200 at 18.2 saw their best efforts lowered to approximately 140.

The 28.2 game is considered 30 per cent more difficult than the 18.1, which means that a player's stay at the table is decreased correspondingly.

There are only four balk spaces, created by drawing a line down the center and across the middle of the table.

This eliminates the center free space, where a player could make any number of shots without driving a ball across a line.

It increases the width of the spaces to 28 inches and the length to almost twice that. With two shots permitted in each balk space, he player must drive at least one of the object balls across a line. As the lines are much farther apart than in the 18.2 or 18.1 game, there are more long drives, which demand more accuracy.

The 28.2 or 11.2 game revived interest in balking in Europe. It has almost entirely supplanted the 18-inch style.

It is believed that the story will be the same in this country, where balking has fallen to its lowest depth because of the quicker action and resultant popularity of three-cushion billiards.

The less intricate design of 28.2 make that game much easier for the spectator to understand when a player is called upon to drive a ball out of balk. The severer handicap abbreviates stays at the table to an even large extent than the 18.1 style, thereby changing the complexion of play more frequently.

Match Seen as Fore-runner of World 28.2 Tournament

No finer exponents of the more difficult 28.2 style could be found than Schaefer and Hoppe, who have dominated billiard play in America for the last three decades.

For 11 years or longer, Hoppe was supreme throughout the world at any style of balking. Some years back, Schaefer's records unheard of before he reached his peak. Hoppe still is the recognized champion at 18.1. Because of his unerring open table play, none can say that any living player is capable of defeating him at this style.

Wesley Cochran and Eric Hugen-lacher, also former world champion at 18.2, undoubtedly will take up 28.2.

As the American leaders become more proficient, it is expected that the foremost balking kings of the other fore, including Roger Conti of France, European titleholder at 28.2, or 11.2, as it is called there, will come to the United States for a world tournament, thus recalling bygone days when this country was the center of international balking competition.

Fleet Ladysman Fails in His Four Biggest Races

Busy Week-End for Conference Teams

Razorbacks Clash With S.M.U. Friday and Saturday Nights

DALLAS, Texas.—(P)—Trend of the southwest Conference basketball chase may be known after Southern Methodist' "surprise" team and Arkansas' Razorbacks, pre-season choice, finish their two-game series here Friday and Saturday nights.

Dumped by dope into the second division, Southern Methodists sparked by Sophomore L. D. Norton, goes into the series protecting a spotless record as league leaders while Arkansas has the sting of a Baylor defeat to erase.

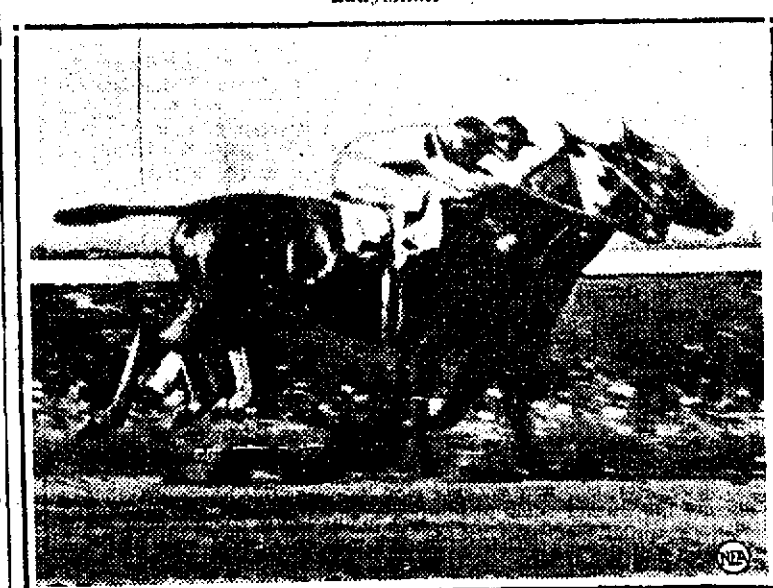

Short on reserves but stingy on the defense and accurate with their basket tosses, the Methodists have knocked over Texas and Texas Christian in two impressive starts. The Arkansas took a licking from Baylor in the season opener but came back the next night to smother the Wacoans.

Coach Jimmy St. Clair is banking on Norton and Bill Blinn, a pair of forwards, to intone the basket while the Razorbacks have two high scorers in Don Lockard and Elwin Gilliland.

Rice's Owls, winners of their only start against Texas A. & M., travel to Austin, Saturday favored to beat out a University of Texas five slow in starting. The Texans, dropped by Texas Christian and Southern Methodist, got a victory over Texas A. & M. Wednesday night.

Baylor, defensive demons in their opener against Arkansas, meet a Texas Aggie team still looking for victory in a Saturday night game at Waco. Clark and Sorelle, Bruin guards, smothered the Razorbacks and will start against an Aggie five that has shown poor offensive form to date.

So Near and Yet So Far

Ladysman's biggest moment—victory over the great Equipoise in the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park in 1934. The winner is on the rail.

Horse Flops When Chips Laid Down

Yet Ladysman One of the Greatest 2-Year-Olds in Past 20 Years

This is the first of five articles on famous racing failures.

By MAX RIDDLE
NEA Service Staff Writer

NEW YORK—Ladysman was one of the greatest 2-year-olds of the past 20 years. He earned $11,000 as a juvenile.

As a four-year-old on May 30, 1934, Ladysman whipped the mighty Equipoise in a thrilling stretch duel in the time-honored Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park. The W. R. Coe stable campaigner possessed speed and could carry weight. The white-faced horse, the stoutness of his heart in numerous other races. He won eight in all and $134,000. He retired to the stud with a splendid reputation and is expected to enjoy his share of success there.

Yet Ladysman was a failure—a tragic one—in the four great efforts of his life. With all his class, pick-up and courage, he flopped when the chips were down.

Ladysman first was a disappointment in the Belmont Futurity of 1932. By virtue of a sparkling victory in the Arlington Futurity and a Saratoga grand slam of the United States Hotel Grand Union Hotel, and Hopeful States, he was an even money choice. Boys to 30-1. Shot in Futurity.

Kerry Patch, a 30-1 shot, beat Ladysman in the Belmont Futurity. Kerry Patch had the luck to get out in front and sufficient pick-up to win a long race. Just when it seemed that he might get through to score, he was blocked. Even then Kerry Patch, which had eight pounds the best of it in the weights, prevailed by less than a length.

The Kentucky Derby of 1933 long will be remembered for the battle between Broken Tip and Head Play, and the fistfuffs between the jockeys, Meade and Fisher. But many also remember that Ladysman, the winter book favorite which carried their money, failed to get up. Brokers Tip went to the post a maiden and never won another race.

Ladysman raced wide for almost the entire mile and a quarter. The extra long journey took too much out of him, with the result that when it was time to move on the leaders he could not rally.

The chips again were down in the Preknexess. It was another Ladysman's game billy, when Head Play, Charles Kuratiger up, ran the most remarkable Preknexess since Man o' War's. He could not be denied in his finest effort, and once more Ladysman ran second.

Trails Outsider in Santa Anita

Ladysman was in position for a killing in the first running of the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap on February, 1935. That was the one in which all the celebrated cripples were entered. Twenty Grand, Equipoise, Mate, several of them failed to get to the post, but nevertheless the field was a remarkable one. No less than 20 started.

Ladysman ran a smashing race. But one other animal ran an even better one. He was Fred M. Alger's imported Azucar, the converted jumper. We know now that, like Kerry Patch, Azucar was not fit to match Braden with Ladysman. Yet that afternoon, when it meant $100,000, Azucar, which paid $20.00 for a $200.00 ticket, was Ladysman's superior. Second money amounted to $10,000.

His best simply wasn't good enough in the big moments, so Ladysman, one of the best horses in years, finished his racing career unable to win any one of the four major objectives of his life.

LEWISVILLE, Ark.—Both the boys' and girls' basketball teams of Lewisville made a clean sweep of a series against their traditional rivals, the Stamps, Ark., quints, by defeating them here Thursday night for the second straight time.

The boys' team defeated Stamps 32-24, while the girls won 22-15.

The boys were ahead of Stamps throughout the whole game of Stamps Thursday night and led 18 to 14 at the half. The Lewisville forwards led the scoring, Beatty making 12 points and Mashaw making 10.

Captain Clayton of Lewisville made 17 points to lead the girls in scoring.

Both the local boys' and girls' teams will play the Panthers at Magnolia Friday night.

65-Pound Catfish Falls for Houston Fisherman

HOUSTON.—(NEA)—Joe Lagow went on a petting party and came home with a 65-pound catfish. Spying the prize specimen in Wahoo Lake, Lagow waded into the water.

"I stroked him on the side and he turned over like a pig," explains the angler. "It was a simple matter to life him out by the gills."

Teachers College Loses to Hendrix

33 Personal Fouls Called in Rough Game at Conway

CONWAY, Ark.—(P)—Hendrix took a 47-42 decision from Arkansas State Teachers Thursday night. It was the Pedagogues' initial tilt in intercollegiate cage warfare for the season. They are defending champions.

The teams waged a fast, hard fought and rough struggle on the Hendrix floor, the Warrior triumph ending a long streak of Teacher wins over the team.

Wilkes topped scores with 17 points. Mathis had 17. Eighteen personal fouls were called against the Teachers and 15 against Hendrix.

Students rushed on the floor near the end of the game when Coleman and Montgomery came near clashing. The disturbance was quelled without further demonstrations.

The game was the first in a series of five. The teams play the second encounter Friday night.

Propose to Plant 13 Million Trees

9,300 Acres of Steep or Eroded Land to Be Given Protection

PORT WORTH, Texas.—Thirteen million seedlings will be needed for erosion control planting on steep or eroded acres and in gullies in Soil Conservation Service projects and camp areas in East Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas, according to Homer C. Mitchell, Region 4 forester, who completed a survey on this work.

The number of acres planted in the region during this season will be some what dependent on the available supply of seedlings, Mr. Mitchell stated. Present plans call for planting a total of 9,300 acres most of which represents steep or eroded land retired from cultivation in project areas of the Service located in the three states.

Reforestation of steep or eroded slopes is one of the most important phases of the coordinated erosion control program of the Soil Conservation Service. The soil-binding qualities of tree roots and moisture-absorbing ability of woodland areas make the use of this type of vegetative cover all important in stopping and controlling erosion on steep or eroded fields. "Such areas cannot be safely or profitably cultivated," Mr. Mitchell says, "but when used for farm woodlands they become valuable as a source of supply for fuel, fence posts and lumber for farm use in addition to protecting the land from the ravages of erosion. Farm woodlands also furnish covert for wildlife."

Soil Conservation Service nurseries located at Shreveport and Kentwood, Louisiana and Nacogdoches, Texas, are supplying most of the seedlings that will be planted.

Little Rock Gets Jinx Poindexter

Mustaikis Also to Hurl for Travelers Next Season

LITTLE ROCK.—Jennings (Jinx) Poindexter, eccentric young left-handed, and Alexander Mustaikis, lanky Lithuanian right-hander, optioned here by the Boston Red Sox during the 1936 season, will continue as members of the Little Rock pitching staff in the next campaign, Doc Prothro, Traveler manager, telegraphed Thursday night.

Poindexter, who tied the modern Southern Association strike-out record by fanning 17 Nashville Vols in a brilliant two-hit performance last summer, won 12 games and lost 11 for the season. His 144 strikeouts led the league although he joined the Red Sox two weeks before the completion of the 1936 schedule. Poindexter's most glaring weakness last season was lack of control.

It will be Mustaikis' third year with the Travelers. Alex won 16 games in 1935 and Mustaikis was acquired by the Boston Americans. He was farmed out here last year but was of little use all season because of arm injury. Mustaikis participated in only 10 games last year. He won four and lost one.

Acquisition of Poindexter and Mustaikis places seven pitchers in the Traveler fold. The others are Bob Porter, Byron Humphreys, Tex Nelson, Alpha (Cotton) Bruize and Wayman Kerksieck.

Bradley Youth to Newark Ball Club

Ralph C. Hammer, Pitcher, to Try Out With Yankee Farm Club

BRADLEY, Ark.—The latest Arkansas boy to take a fling at professional baseball as a pitcher is Ralph C. (Bruiz) Hammer of Bradley, Lafayette county, who recently signed a contract with Newark club of the International League, a New York Yankee farm. He has been ordered to join the Newark club's spring camp at Oakland, Calif., in February.

Hammer attended school at Centenary College and the University of Texas. While pitching for Texas during the 1936 campaign, "Bruiz" was scouted by W. E. Essick, credited with discovering such famous Yankee stars as Vernon (Lefty) Gomez and Joe DiMaggio. It is said that Scout Essick best the Boston Red Sox to the pitch in obtaining the expected Arkansas prize.

Pitching semi-professionally in south Arkansas and north Louisiana last summer, Hammer fanned 55 men, allowed 10 hits and walked five men in 33 innings. One of his chief assets is coolness under fire.

Hammer is 20 and towers four inches over six feet. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Hammer of Bradley.

Warneke to Teach at Doan Baseball School

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(P)—Ray Doan announced Thursday he has signed Lon Warneke, St. Louis Cardinal right-hander, as a hurling "professor" at his annual baseball school here February 15-April 1.

Other major league hurlers who will instruct here in throwing baseball include Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, Cardinal ace, and E. B. Feller, sensational 18-year-old Cleveland Indian star.

Warneke can walk from his home to the baseball campus. He recently moved here from his Norman (Ark.) farm.

THIS CADDY GOES ROUTE

There would be no necessity of limiting the number of golf clubs as long as Man Mountain Dean was available for caddying purposes as the wrestler was for Johnny Revolta, 1935 P. G. A. champion, in the $8000 Los Angeles Open.

Arkansas Tech Easily Wins From Fort Smith

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark.—The Arkansas Tech eagles found no trouble in burying the Fort Smith Junior College Lions under a 56-to-22 score here Thursday night on the Tech court.

The Techmen took command in the opening minutes and never relinquished the lead. At the half the score was 32 to 12.

Gunter, Tech forward, led the scoring with 13 points. His teammate, Thompson, center, accounted for nine. For the Lions, McCoy, forward, was high with eight.

Sterling Stallions

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(P)—It may cost money to make his Calumet farm here one of the nation's leading thoroughbred establishments, but Warren Wright is willing to spend it. He invested nearly $100,000 in acquiring the two stallions, Chance Play and Bostonian. Moreover, Wright owns the young sire, Hadagal, and is one-fourth owner of the $245,000 imported French sire, Blenheim II.

Haste Hastens

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(P)—What's in a name? A track record of 2:03 2/5 for the mile and one-quarter was set by Haste in winning the 1926 Fairmont derby. The Wilder star also won three other large stakes, Murph, Sophie Tucker, and Lady Day; and the 36 2-year-old winners, Quick Vene, Handle Cross, Hasty Wire, Four Eleven, Spicy, Sally Quick and Scrooge—all are sons and daughters of Haste.

Public "Cleaned"

Guaranty company, New York securities firm, was interested in selling a Van Sweringen Corporation note issue. Asserting that "these notes are portfolios of busted banks," Wheeler said investors lost more than half the $30,000,000 they put into the Van Sweringen Corporation. The firm went bankrupt in 1936, he said, and had been insolvent "much earlier."

He introduced a memorandum from Alfred Shriver, former Guaranty company vice president, to Karl W. Eiseit, an associate, discussing possibility of the corporation going bankrupt.

This was followed by another inter-office memorandum dated three days later, in which F. L. Moore, another vice president, suggested "a campaign" on these bonds either prior or immediately following convention of the American Banking Association.

Joseph R. Swan, former Guaranty Company president, insisted that the discussion of possible bankruptcy was "purely theoretical" and that "Shriver would never consider selling securities if he really thought they were endangered by bankruptcy."

'Scotty's' Wife Breaks Silence

Thirty-six years the wife of one of the nation's most-publicized figures—and never before photographed for a newspaper—Mrs. Ella J. Scott, 60, is shown above, after she had filed suit for separate maintenance from Walter "Death Valley" Scott in Los Angeles. She declared she had given up her dream of quiet happiness with "Scotty" after 36 years of vain waiting.

Contenders for Texas Grid Post Narrowing

AUSTIN, Texas.—(P)—Interest in the University of Texas football coaching situation reached the sizzling point Thursday with the withdrawal of Tew Twomey, strong contender for the job, which left Dana X. Bible, of Nebraska to lead the field of a half dozen candidates.

Reports from Nebraska indicated Bible might confer soon with the Texas athletic council, which will make recommendations to the board of regents. J. C. Dalley, chairman, said this is unlikely, however, but added he hoped to announce the council's choice within a week.

Robinson Preps 28th Wildcat Swim Team

CHICAGO.—(NEA)—Tom Robinson is preparing his 28th Northwestern University swimming team for Big Ten competition.

The 34-year-old coach, who looks at least 10 years younger, has turned out 11 conference championship teams and six national collegiate title-winning combinations. He has taught swimming for 31 years.
